b) my liking for painting and my practice in judging it have arrived at such a point that when any work is brought before me, either of dead artists or of those of the present day, without the names being told me, I say on the spur of the moment that it is the work of such and such a man. And if there be a picture containing many portraits, and each face be the work of a different master, I can discover which face is the work of each of them. If any other person has put in the eye and eyebrow of a face, I can tell whose work the original face is, and who has painted the eye and eyebrow.
